With one Australian title now under his belt, Queenslander Adam Scott is headed home in December with one thing on his mind- to win in his home state and claim the 2010 Australian PGA Championship presented by Coca-Cola.

Having claimed the Stonehaven Cup in an emotional victory at the end of last year, Adam Scott will play the 2010 Australian PGA Championship at the Hyatt Regency Coolum from December 9-12 with nothing to prove to his home state fans.

At 29 Scott claimed his first PGA Tour of Australasia crown at the Australian Open in Sydney last year, but still feels a trophy won in his home state would compliment his growing collection of silverware. READ MORE&&&
