Graham Marsh has been heavily involved in the golf industry for more than four decades, mostly as a touring professional, followed by successful career as a golf course designer.

But at 66, the man who started life as a mathematics teacher has started to slow down – just a little.

Marsh, affectionately known as ‘Swampy’, may be semi-retired from tournament golf, but he won’t be taking a back-seat approach to his golf course design business.

“I took retirement from the Champions Tour in the US which means I’m only eligible to play 11 tournaments a year,” said Marsh, who has been on the tour for 17 years.” READ MORE>>>
