

NEW AND IMPROVED:

Written by TMAC GOLF

Tuesday, 30 September 2008 14:38

Tour Edge citing constant improvement in Iron-Wood design technology has introduced the JMAX Draw Iron-Wood. Unlike past JMAX models, Tour Edge said the new model's long irons feature an ultra-wide sole while the sole of the scoring irons narrows considerably for maximum playability throughout the set.

The Iron-Wood's hollow, hyper steel head features an internal weight pad in the sole, which lowers and progressively deepens the club's center of gravity (CG) through the set, the company said. The CG is positioned higher and closer to the face in the scoring irons and is deeper and lower in the long irons.

The JMAX Draw Iron-Wood is available individually or in 3-PW sets in men's and women's right hand and left hand in graphite shaft from $79 per club to $499 for an entire set. The JMAX draw comes with Tour Edge's 30-day play guarantee and a lifetime warranty.